

Mahra Weber, M.S., CCC-SLP, is an enthusiastic speech and feeding therapist who emphasizes creating a warm, welcoming, and fun environment for patients and their families. Mahra graduated from Boston University with a Bachelor of Science in Speech, Language, and Hearing Sciences. Mahra continued her studies at Boston University in an accelerated program, subsequently earning a Master of Science in Speech-Language Pathology.

While in graduate school, Mahra completed clinical externships in a variety of settings including: medical rehabilitation facilities, Framingham, MA public schools, and Boston University's in-house speech and language therapy center where she provided group and individual language therapy for preschool-aged children. Mahra was invited to complete her final clinical externship at New Jersey Pediatric Feeding Associates. At NJPFA, Mahra was introduced to specialized speech, language, and feeding treatments such as PROMPT and sensory approaches such as the Sequential Oral Sensory (SOS) approach. She is now trained in Beckman Oral Motor Protocol, kinesiotaping, neuromuscular electrical stimulation (NMES), and the DIR/Floortime Model. By implementing these skills and trainings along with evidenced-based practice, she is qualified to evaluate and treat children with: sensorimotor feeding delays and/or disorders as well as speech and language disorders. Mahra has a particular interest in feeding disorders as well as articulation, receptive/expressive language, and social language disorders.

Mahra is passionate about the support she provides for all of her patients and their families. She strives to think critically to develop individualized treatment plans that focus on the 'whole child' and the 'whole family' to ensure that goals are comprehensive and achieved successfully during sessions and at home. She loves making therapy as exciting and rewarding as possible for her patients. Mahra prides herself in maintaining a sincere and active involvement in the care of her patients and in cheering them on every step of the way!
